About two miles north of Snow Hill on Rt ~~113~~ 113 is the ruin of the Old Alms House, built in 1837. It was $1\frac{1}{2}$ stories and built of brick laid in flemish bond. It is five bays wide and two rooms deep. Originally it had five dormers on each side of the roof. The most noteworthy feature of this ruin is the floorplan. It has a central hall and a cross hall the full length and depth of the building and the floor is brick. In each of the four sections of the building are two rooms, the end rooms have wood floors and the center rooms have brick floors. The end rooms also have fireplaces. There is a stair at each end of the cross hall. The interior trim was very simple. The floorplan of the second floor is difficult to see since the roof has collapsed. There are two chimneys on each gable end.
